DEMONSTRATION FORESTS

Demonstration Forests are smaller than DNR's state forests and provide research opportunities and educational examples of sustainable natural resource management practices. Stoney and Doncaster Demonstration Forests are managed as separate land units, whereas the others are managed as part of a state forest. The Potomac-Garrett State Forest manages the Kindness Demonstration Forest, and the Chesapeake Forest Lands manages the Fred W. Besley, Seth, and Wicomico Demonstration Forests. While a State Forest has multi-use management as a goal, and provide economical and ecological benefits to the surrounding community, a Demonstration Forest shows examples of particular practices, and may not offer many recreational activities.

Kindness Demonstration Forest, Potomac-Garrett State Forest, 1
Provides examples for wildlife improvement practices, and is the birthplace of forestry and conservation in Maryland

Seth Demonstration Forest, Chesapeake Forest Lands, 11
Provides examples for Ecologically Significant Areas

Stoney Demonstration Forest, 4
Provides examples for silvicultural practices

Fred W. Besley Demonstration Forest, Chesapeake Forest Lands, 11
Provides examples of critical habitat management

Wicomico Demonstration Forest, Chesapeake Forest Lands, 11
Provides examples for sustainable forestry

Doncaster Demonstration Forest, 7
Provides examples for assisting landowners in managing their own woodland
