

Garrett County Solar and Wind Zoning

Garrett County does not have a zoning code for the County as a whole, only municipal-level zoning for the Deep Creek Watershed and the towns of Friendsville, Oakland, Accident, Mountain Lake Park, Grantsville, and Loch Lynn Heights. Garrett County does not have language specific to the siting of small-scale or large-scale solar or wind projects in any of its zoning codes.

Guidance for Viewing Excerpts

SOLAR

Summary

- Garrett County does not have specific zoning regulations for large-scale solar projects in any of its zoning codes. However, correspondence with County officials in 2021 determined that Garrett County does not prohibit large-scale solar projects in any of its zoning districts.

Relevant Sections of the Garrett County Code

- No document available for viewing.

SMALL SOLAR

Summary

- Garrett County does not have specific zoning regulations for small-scale solar projects in any of its zoning codes. However, correspondence with County officials in 2021 determined that Garrett County does not prohibit small-scale solar projects in any of its zoning districts.

Relevant Sections of the Garrett County Code

- No document available for viewing.

WIND

Summary

- Garrett County does not have specific zoning regulations for large-scale wind projects in any of its zoning codes. However, correspondence with County officials in 2021 determined that Garrett County does not prohibit large-scale wind projects in any of its zoning districts.

Relevant Sections of the Garrett County Code

- No document available for viewing.

SMALL WIND

Summary

- Garrett County does not have specific zoning regulations for small-scale wind projects in any of its zoning codes. However, correspondence with County officials in 2021 determined that Garrett County does not prohibit small-scale wind projects in any of its zoning districts.

Relevant Sections of the Garrett County Code

- No document available for viewing.