Guidelines for Judging

- Five judges and one alternate will be selected annually. Any of the following circumstances would disqualify a potential judge: having an entry of his/her own entered; having a relative with an entry; having seen an entry; having or planning any kind of financial interest in the work of any entering artist; having or planning any financial interest in the printing, distribution, or sale of the waterfowl prints; having close personal or social connections with an entering artist or having enough familiarity with an entering artist's work that there would be a high probability of recognizing those entries.
- The judging will be open to the public, but the contest director may close the contest to the public if there is any sign of communication between the audience and the judges.
- Entries will be given randomly selected numbers so that multiple submissions by the same artist will not appear in sequence.
- There will be no communication among the judges during the judging of the entries.
- For the first round of judging, each entry will or will not receive a checkmark from each judge. Entries receiving two or more checkmarks will advance to the second round.
- For the second round, judges will conduct a silent vote by holding up a score card indicating how many of one to six points they are giving each entry. Judges will not consult each others' cards. A highest point number and a lowest point number will be dropped, with the remaining points totaled for the score. The total will not be announced. Entries having 12 or more points will advance to the third round.
- For the third (final) round, judges will again conduct a silent vote by holding up a score card indicating how many of the three to six points they are giving each entry. In the third round, all points will be counted and the artwork receiving the highest number of points will be the winner.
- In the case of a tie for first, the judges will choose a winner.
- The winner will be announced immediately following the final round of competition. There will be no official second or third place or honorable mention. The names of the top 3 artists receiving the highest total points will be made available upon request.
- Protests, by contestants only, may be registered with the contest director and should be submitted, clearly stated and in writing, within five (5) working days after the judging. In the event the winning entry is disqualified, the entry receiving the second highest score shall be declared the winner.
